To Whom It May Concern:

Landology, owned and operated by Trina Decker, was a key partner for AshBritt Environmental during the successful clean-up mission in Napa, Sonoma, Lake and Mendocino Counties after the October 2017 northern California wildfires. As the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, South Pacific Division, prime contractor for emergency response debris management, AshBritt requires sub-contractors to work in immediate post-emergency situations. This requires performing at the highest level of operations for an industry, displaying the upmost professionalism, sensitivity, and flexibility, and providing a high volume of equipment, staffing, and resources on an expedited time-frame. The Landology team superseded these requirements.

Landology managed performance for AshBritt on a significant piece of a publicly funded project that overall superseded $500 million dollars. AshBritt received complements on Landology's operations from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers operations team and from property owners who lost their homes during the fires. This speaks to Landology's quality of work and professionalism, all of which is a testament to Ms. Decker's leadership.

Ms. Decker was AshBritt's primary Landology contact. She coordinated with our senior leadership team on planning, operations, data management, scheduling, and billing. Landology's performance was strong. The company, under Ms. Decker's leadership, can perform for any scale project, public or private sector. Our team looks forward to working with Landology, and Ms. Decker, on future projects.

Sincerely,

Brittany Perkins Castillo
Chief Executive Officer, AshBritt Inc.
